

Self Critique (COM 421)

Making each page individually was not difficult itself, but I struggled to structure the pages in the way I wanted it to be. I attempted to adjust the CSS elements, (such as padding, margin, inline etc.) but was still unable to obtain the layout I wanted. Figuring out how to keep a width for the body without compromising the inline structure for the navigation was quite a challenge. When I am able to find the time in the future, hopefully I can figure out the desired styling. In addition, there was far too much space between each element for the aside windows for my liking, resulting in a horizontal scroll bar. I found that there was too much white space on the page. I tried to adjust the padding/margin, but I found it challenging to change the spacing without impacting the other elements. Overall, in due time, I am confident that I will be able to learn from this project and improve my skills in CSS/HTML.